Research Analysis

The proposed committee substitute to HB 1095 allows the court to prohibit a defendant, pursuant to the terms and conditions of a written plea agreement, from entering, visiting or residing within the judicial district in which the defendant was convicted until after completion of his or her sentence. The court is to ensure the defendant has access to services or programs which the defendant is required to participate as a condition of probation. When seeking to enter the prohibited judicial district for personal business not related to his or her criminal case, the defendant shall be required to obtain approval by the court.

Fiscal Analysis

The proposed committee substitute to HB 1095 provides that a court may, pursuant to the terms and conditions of a written plea agreement, prohibit a defendant from entering, visiting or residing within the judicial district in which the defendant was convicted until after completion of the defendant's sentence.

The measure expands the judgement and sentence powers of courts, but does not mandate any new expenditures or create new revenues. The exact impact is under review, but an overall impact to the state is unlikely.
