Research Analysis

The PCS1 to HB 2490 removes restrictions to allow the court to modify the initial sentence of an offender at any time. The measure provides that the court may extend the supervision of an offender for up to three years if the offender has committed a new crime while on supervision or willfully failed to pay restitution owed. The measure allows a defendant to petition the court at any time during a deferred judgement for a finding that the conditions of the deferral have been met.
