Bill Analysis

SB 178 modifies proceedings relating to trial reunification. The measure clarifies that the court must set the date of review for the trial reunification within 6 months and that the court may return legal custody to the parent or legal guardian if the reunification appears successful. Additionally, if the court determines trial reunification should be extended, the court is directed to set a new date for review. The measure limits the time period a child may spend in a trial reunification to 12 months.
